today of Augusta's most disastrous fire of recent years. About 700 houses were destroyed and at least 3,000 persons are homeless.

The fire, which raged for more than nine hours last night, causing a loss estimated at from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000, was brought under control early today after it had crossed Green street.

An aera of about one and one-fourth square miles was swept by the flames, which were driven by a heavy gale. The Augusta firemen were powerless, and fire apparatus was sent from Columbia, Charleston, Atlanta, Macon, Savannah and Waynesboro. The wind subsided just after 1 o'clock, and it was not until then that the firemen could gain in their fight.

day on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. The arresting policeman testimed that Lowry had been in Ozy Hinch man's saloon in Virginia avenue, waving a dagger and informing everybody in the place that he intended to use it on his wife. The porter of the saloon testified that he saw Lowry in the saloon, but that the weapon was too large for a dagger. "I'd call it an ornament," he said.

Lowry declared the weapon was a souvenir which he had made, and which he was taking to his sister-in-law's house. He thought she might wish to hang it on the wall, he said. Mrs. Lowry, who is separated from her husband, told the just after 1 o'clock, and it was not until then that the firemen could gain in their fight.

Spreads to Cotton Row. Starting in the Dyer building, at Eighth and Broad streets, the fire spread rapidly to Cotton row, in the rear, whipped to Cotton row, in the rear, whipped around the Empire Life building, and then by leaps and bounds destroyed block after block, except the 600 square in Broad street. The flames cut a path from two to three blocks wide for eight blocks in Broad street down to East Boundary, the end of the city. The flames leaped across Broad street to the south side of Elbert street and cut their way through to Green street.

street. Many of the homes destroyed were of brick construction. On the south side of Broad street a substantial brick building was destroyed, while a filmsy wooden house next door was not damaged. The street railway company, the telephone company and the electric lighting company suffered heavy losses and service was crippled.

BERLIN (by wireless to Sayville, N. Y.), March 23.-Details of the exploits of the German commerce raider Moewe have been given by her commander, Captain The day after the capture of the Appam by the Moewe, says the Overseas News Agency summary of the account of reminiscences, the steamer Clan Macmorning. The MacTavish being fast, it was only after a long chase that the Moewe was able to get near her. Then followed a wireless conversation, the Moewe asking: "What ship are you?" The MacTavish, being somewhat mistrustful, answered: "Who are you?"

"At the same time the wireless operator of the Moewe informed me that the MacTavish was using her wireless, even after the first warning shot was fired. Then we sent our first shell, which exploded on the bridge. The firing went on until after the MacTavish had been hit several times she wirelessed: 'We have really stopped.'

Captain Forgets Ship's Name. "A month later, in the night, a ship was sighted whose nationality it was impossible to learn. Her most clever cappossible to learn. Her most clever captain, when I asked him who she was, gave me a name which was not to be found in any of the shipping registers. I asked again, on which he gave another name. The captain afterward told me that in his confusion he really had forgotten the name he gave first.

"It was a matter of utter indifference," added Count Dohna-Schlodien, humorously, "under which name the ship was sunk, but it was pitiful that we should have to sink a steamer with 1,000 bottles of champagne on board, as we had no more of the stuff ourselves."
